Our aim in the past has been, and our intentions in the future are, to supply the public with the best quality of Furniture at prices within the reach of all. We are enabled to keep so wide an immense stock of goods, and to supply them at such low prices, by reason of the fact that we have been carrying on our business within a period of the days or less. Our efforts are equally suited to the cottage as to the palace. These commodities, encompassing, or coming within the range of the word Furniture, are sold at the very first time to Sydney, should you as a visit of inspection, the

THE CARRINGTON DRAWING ROOM SUITE
—This suite is our own special make. No other firm in town has ever made a drawing room suite so cheap, so liberal with which it is covered, plush and trimmings, are so good, so comfortable, so durable, so refined and good taste. It is difficult, without illustration to describe this charming little bijou suite, and we can only say that it is a real gem in the drawing room. It is like. All that we can do is to acquaint the public of the fact that we have a drawing room suite that is so liberal. The suite is manufactured in our own workshops in Kent street, under personal supervision. The best material, and labour is used in the construction, and the price of this suite is £20 14s.

d to give the world some evidence of the progress that New South Wales has made during the first hundred years of her existence. A grand international exhibition would have done this; but that idea has been contemptuously thrown on one side. What prospect does the Government programme offer of attaining the object in view? If it ould be carried out in all its details, as we did on Saturday, the celebration might have a effect intended; but what chance is there that? What inducement is offered to the world and his wife to come to Sydney 1888? Centennial celebrations, plus a great exhibition, might have acted as a draw," but how many people are likely to come from the Old World for the purpose of looking at our reviews, our illuminations, or our fireworks? And if they will not come to imire and applaud our spectacular efforts, that prospect is there that they will come at last! The PRINCE OF WALES would, of course, a great prize, but he has already declined an invitation from South Australia, and the probability that he would accept an invitation from us, even on such an interesting occasion the celebration of our centenary, is not very exact. The "eminent men in politics, literature, and art," who are to be asked to honour us with their society, will probably have something better to do than to come to a "carnival." There are, of course, the members of the British Association. They at rate are safely bagged. that is to say, if the colony will provide the trifling sum that will be required to defray the expenses of 200 300 gentlemen from London to Sydney and back again, and provide for them also during their stay in this city. There is a slight drawback, certainly; they cannot come all. About one-third, the other two-thirds in August, while the celebration is to take place in January and February, but this is a mere matter of detail. We shall have the solicity of entertaining the Association, even though they may arrive six months after the centennial demonstration has been held, and they come late it will be a satisfaction to know that they were invited early.

If the members of this learned society come all they will come as our guests, but will anyone else who is invited be placed on the same footing? Shall we have the pleasure of providing for the eminent men in politics, literature, and art who are expected, and also members of the Ministries and the legis-tors of all the colonies and dependencies of the Empire, to say nothing of mayors, councillors, and still humbler members of society, from the colonies immediately about us? If it is intended to show universal and all-round hospitality, besides providing entertainments and sights for the million, we may find that we have been more generous than just. It will be very nice indeed to have a lot of admiring visitors, but we are to pay for everybody, it may become necessary to float an extra loan at an inconvenient time. Seriously, the Government programme is vain where it should be pre-be supplied, and that must be supplied before the programme can be properly discussed. Not a word was said on Friday as to the probable cost of giving effect to the Government proposals, and the impression conveyed was that a lot of suggestions had been thrown together without much attempt at analysis.

men thrown together without much attention having been given to the practicability of the scheme as a whole. The House should insist on having at once a full and explanatory statement of the proposals so indefinitely stretched last week.

The first of a series of papers by a special commissioner, despatched three weeks ago from this office to report upon the scrub lands of the West, discloses a serious state of affairs. It appears that an immense tract, 250 miles length and of a mean width of 130 miles, the heart of what hitherto has been regarded as the best wool-producing country of the

The best wool-producing country of the colony, is so overcome by pine scrub as to be unable to pasture one-third of the number of sheep which it successfully supported seven years ago. Worse still, it is shown that the scrubs are infested by rabbits. Our commissioner who is well qualified to judge, states that he delegates from various pastoral associa-ons who waited upon the hon. the MINISTER R LANDS on the 5th instant, to seek fresh sideration for the scrubby districts, under-estimated the danger with which the public estate is threatened. He shows that will be useless to hunt the rabbits off the pared lands if the scrubs are allowed remain. The pastoral associations ask permission to destroy noxious growth, and certain concessions for so doing, the action to be optional. Our commissioner puts forth the opinion that there could be no option in the matter, but that the work should commence at once, and be impulsory. He says in effect, compel the State to destroy pine and other useless trees, which can be quickly and effectively killed, and encourage similar work in the resumed areas. This seems a reasonable view. The resumed areas for the greater part now belong to the State, and it is part of the Government. If the

in charge of the Government leasees who occupy them merely on sufferance until they are selected by a smaller class of titlers for grazing or other purposes, will not destroy the noxious scrub, the Government must either do it or seek others who may.
 The suggestion that the amounts paid to pastoral leasees for scrub destruction resumed areas should be returned to them the new tenants is also within the bounds of fairness. The country is quite valuable enough to warrant the outlay. Some time ago it bore a sheep to every three or four acres. It is good land, not badly favoured for the important requisite rainfall. One of its tations, a property of about 420,000 acres, received during the last six years rain which averaged 15 inches per year. In 1880 had 170,000 sheep, the clip from which yielded over 1800 bales, which when full weighed about 420lb. each. But the losses sheep through adverse seasons—the rains the last year was only 501 bales. The squatter who purchased this property in 1881 with its stock for over £180,000 is now a poor man. The pine scrub has so overcome the land that over £80,000 must be expended in ringbarking before it can be made equal to the pine.

its former store-carrying capacity. This one of the many cases which may be taken in proof of the condition of this ponder pine forest. Perhaps one of the strongest arguments in favour of tending all the help possible to the lessees the unfortunate tract, although our commissioner does not use it, is that upon it no attempt has been made to hinder the small church matters, but who has not had the benefit of the experience that I doubt not some of your correspondents possess. I have become so weary of the usual "correspondence" which is so common, but which contains but little argument against "Ritualism." While the majority of writers who are in favor of Ritualism have advanced some telling argument and apparent facts which the opposing party have not seemed to meet so thoroughly, I refuse, however, to regard the Ritualists as the more eloquent in Church. I should like to have some reasons for this burst of opposition to Ritualism. Let us in this, as in other matters, use soft words and hard arguments, for soft reason alone must prevail. I am, &c.,

GRAFTON-TWEED RAILWAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Before we are finally pledged to spend more hundreds of thousands of the money which we are puzzled ourselves how by hook or by crook to raise, it would be well to inquire to what purpose the money is to be put. We venture to say that much more for it to be constructed upon to any that most people, if they really knew the public money was to go, would be aghast at. I write now of the Graton-Tweed railway project, but I will not say that it is a waste paper. As one of the people who are in the country to have a try to throw a little light upon the most outrageous of our railway projects—one any rate, that happens to have come particularly under notice.

This enormity—the Graton-Tweed railway—may be divided into three sections. The first is from Graton to Casino, the second from Casino to Lismore, the third from Lismore to Tweed. The first section is 70 miles long, the second about 20, the third only roughly nearly 30. The country near the first between Graton and Casino is generally undulating. It is for the most part, flat or undulating, and is generally suitable for raising. It is barren Casino and Lismore, it is the soil mostly rich basalt, and I believe the same sort of country extends to the Tweed. Grafton is situated on the north bank of the Clarence river, about 40 miles from the mouth of the river. The barely practicable navigation of the true Richmond, or the Tismore at its mouth, is a serious obstacle to the commerce of navigation—easy navigation for large boats is confined to the lower reaches of the river, and a distinct river, called, by a misnomer of words, the north arm of the Richmond. I do not know what part of the Tweed river is intended to strike.

Those rivers the one to the south-west, the other to the south-east, are the Tweed, the one the Queensland border. Towards proving the navigation of the Clarence—principally entrance—large sums of money have been spent; what has been the result? The navigation of the river, I think, on the whole, may be said to be a comparatively good one, and it is almost certain that judicious expenditure such as, if it be hoped, will follow Sir John Coode's project, will be of great service to the river, and easy for all classes of coasters, at any rate. Richmond itself is a deep, easily navigable stream, but it is difficult to treat compared with the Tweed. From the Tweed, the river is a great improvement; as a craft suitably designed can generally enter in and out with ease. Three-masted schooners are to be seen long away from those sections nearest to Livorno nor do a little work—so little that it is not worth mentioning. It is highly probable that the river steamers trading between Livorno and the interior will be obliged to use these steamers meeting the Livorno river boats at Corsi, at the junction of the Cosmo and Livorno branches of the river. The boats will be obliged to stop at Corsi to contend for one moment that the Richmond trade will leave Livorno, on a navigable river, to travel nearly a hundred miles, and then to be obliged to go back to another river, is idle.

Then there is the section north of Livorno. The navigation of the Tevere is bad; still it exists; and a jetty is being made at the mouth of the river. The Tevere Heads, which is, I suppose, expected to be of some use to the navigation of the Tevere, will be of no use. No doubt the rich lands of the Big Scrub will be made available for the navigation of the Tevere. It will be parallel with the sea, but as one of the feeders of the Richmond navigation, that it will be of use.

Taken altogether, I think of some hundred miles of navigation, and I am satisfied that it will be a great part of it running through indifferently fertile country, with, I am satisfied, not nearly any working farms. I am satisfied that the navigation of the Tevere, on the lines, it must be remembered that their products—sugar, corn, &c.—are similar; there will be probably no other products.

But, then, it is said—and a fine-sounding phrase—conviction to weak minds—this line should be gone to the mouth of the Tevere, and then to the coast, to the Coast Railway (to be begun at the wrong end).

Are we so wealthy that for an idea—a name—we afford to fight against nature, to ignore all teachings experience? I assert that, in spite of the results of war, of pestilence, of taxation, of robbery, that we have a stain of disgrace somewhere, we have one of the most beautiful coasts in the world. The ports no longer of Sydney are Broken Bay, Newcastle, Port Stephens, the Manning, Port Macquarie, the Macleay, the Clarence, and the Richmond, besides numbers of smaller harbours and creeks. Our duty is to make these harbours as good as we could and to let them be—as they will be in spite of us—outlets of our colonial trade. Light lines radiating from these ports should gradually be laid, to serve the surrounding country, and to connect the various ports. If it appears already to be a good practicable port, it may be wise to connect it with the table-land and western slope Naturally, it will be asked—Why is such a line so popular? The answer is simple. It is the only line of the kind in the world. First comes the great Sydney carrying a trade monopoly ring. Just as Sydney forces the colonies to work for her, so she forces the colonies to work for a loss, while the colony is made to pay for extra charges on other lines, by taxation of one kind or another—trade which naturally belongs to Melbourne. The Sydney line is a monopoly, and a monopoly is a short-sighted greed does the Sydney interest fondly but that, by running railways the railways parallel with the sea.

colonial ports—can pass the trade through its own narrow straits instead of only through its harbour. A vain hope, and, besides, the assumption that such selfish policy can be made to work against all, a suicidal course. For if, by any strange chagenee, northern goods could be sold at a added inducement to carrying southward our exports from far away ports, so that they would pass the now international port of Newcastle to travel 100 miles by rail to Sydney? I should think not; whereas, if shipped from a northern coast town to port, the same goods would probably come to Port Jackson by sea, and the shipping charges would be less. So that the grabbing policy could only amount to fail—a substituted Newcastle for Sydney.

There then is the second, the local, motive. What nine-tenths of the people who grow at "monster" farms are engaged in? The answer is, sheep raising. And what do they engross their little flocks upon? Ministers who have

NEARLY 30 YEARS AGO a man rather unwilling to take five £200 shares in the Colonial Trust Company of the Cape, and paid £10 on each share. He was paid for 30 years dividends on each £10 paid, rising from 16s to £27 per share equivalent to from 2s per cent. rising to £270 per cent. per annum. He died, having first received the dividends amounting all to over £2500, and then the balance of £9 12s for each £10 paid all to over £2500, would readily sell for £250 for each £10 share, and each share would readily sell for £250, or £1000 in all. Reader, likewise. What has been done at the Cape is a far more liberal one. It is based in Victoria, where the Trustee Company is established in 1871, and has again paid £18 per share for the last 10 years. The shares are £1 each, carrying 10% interest, and the holders of 10 shares of £1 paid fetch £1. There has been no reason why the like should not attend the Australian Trust, Management, Assurance, and Investment Company Limited. OVER FOUR-FIFTHS of its Shares are in the hands of the public, and the Company is not a speculative one. It is composed of Make a sound and extensive acquaintance with the provision for yourself in your will, and for your widow and children as well. It is a safe and good way of applying for a few before the clock strikes. There are £1 each, payable in cash, or by instalments of not less than 1s per month; and mark, being Founders' Shares, they have a PREFERENTIAL CUMULATIVE dividend of 10% per annum, payable from payment in full, in preference of all other shareholders, who are not entitled to any dividend until they have taken up their capital.
